

As some of you may know, Autodesk have recently released a "light" version of Revit, aptly called "Revit LT". This product is predominantly aimed at the small Practise, and one-man businesses. Basically, any scenario where worksharing and collaboration are not such a priority.

One Blogger, Tony, has taken to focus his site on this new offering. Simply called "Revit LT", this website takes readers through all the specifics of Revit LT.

Although only in it's infancy, the site is slick and very professional in it's presentation. We wish Tony all the VERY best with his blog and look forward to learning a lot more about Revit LT.

You can find the Revit LT website here